Abstract

Your short (≤ 150 words) abstract goes here.

1 Introduction

Use the `\acknowledgements` command to add an acknowledgements footnote after your first sentence.[†] Do not put page numbers on your paper – this will be done automatically.

2 Analysis

2.1 Referencing

- Use `\citet` when mentioning the reference in a running text: “Dalrymple (2015) deals with morphology in LFG.”
 - Use `\citealt` to omit the parentheses: “LFG covers all aspects of linguistic structure (and this includes morphology, as Dalrymple 2015 shows).”
- Use `\citep` for parenthetical references: “Morphology is easy to deal with in LFG (Dalrymple 2015).”
- Both take an optional argument for page numbers: “Dalrymple (2015: 66) illustrates the split between p-form and s-form (Dalrymple & Mycock 2011: 177).”

2.1.1 More detail

Don’t use anything smaller than a `\subsubsection`.

3 Conclusion

Some conclusions.
